

BLUEPRINT

Formulate your DR plan so your organization thrives in a crisis.

Simulated exercises deliver real-world data so you can prepare no matter what happens next.

Some of the best plans can go south when the stakes become high, and even the most thorough plans can start to fall apart during a crisis. This is why it's critical to walk through many different crisis scenarios before disaster strikes.

11:11 Consulting Services Tabletop exercises are a key step your strategic plans will be successful whenever they're put into action. These sessions are structured discussions, facilitated by our expert consultants to simulate a real-world disruption or crisis. Participants gather in-person or virtually to discuss and evaluate roles, responsibilities, and respond to hypothetical scenarios, focusing on decision-making, coordination, communication, and problem-solving.

These specialist-lead simulations are designed to probe your response plan for any weaknesses that can be identified and addressed before a real incident causes serious harm. This important proactive process can identify vulnerabilities or gaps in plans, procedures, or resources. Organizations without a developed crisis plan can also use tabletop exercises to assess how their organization would respond to a disruptive event.
